Romulus grant application would create cultural center

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

Romulus city officials have applied for a $100,000 grant from the state of Michigan through the state Equity Program. Funds will be used to complete the restoration and site improvements at the Romulus Historical Museum, housed in the first schoolhouse built in the township in 1839.

"We're going to call it, 'The Cultural Center,'" said Pearl Varner, historical society president.

The project involves the complete restoration of the building and landscaping of the two surrounding acres, currently owned by the city. Development of the site was first undertaken in 1986 by the historical society, the city of Romulus and the historical commission.

"The completed site and facility will provide a focus for Romulus civic and cultural events as well as restoring a valuable historical resource to a position of prominence in the city and the entire southeast Michigan region," said Dennis Oakes, director of Romulus Community and Economic Development and administrator of the project.

The project would be complete within 12 months and if the grant is approved, would begin Jan. 4, 1988.

"The new facility will not only enrich the community culturally, but should provide an impetus to attract tourists and private investment into the Romulus central business district," Oakes added.

"The project incorporates more than Romulus citizens. Ultimately, this will be more of a regional focal point. Like Artrain which was visited by more than 1,000 people a day during its visit this spring, we want this project to involve more people than just local residents," said Varner, who emphasized the proximity to the airport as a positive factor.

Oakes stated that a "well-designed city commons" would be created within the downtown and would draw people interested in both the museum and other outdoor activities, such as concerts, recitals, plays and performances.

The project would increase the number of persons visiting the area who would utilize the local commercial activities and stimulate city business.

Land values would increase and because the site would be "aesthetically pleasing," nearby property owners would be encouraged to maintain their sites better.

Aside from the opportunity of school field trips, a seasonal farmer's market could regularly be offered at the site.

"It would serve to encourage a rethinking of the role of downtown Romulus as a potential location for residential and commercial activity. Again, Romulus is thought of as a community with an identified focus," said Oakes.

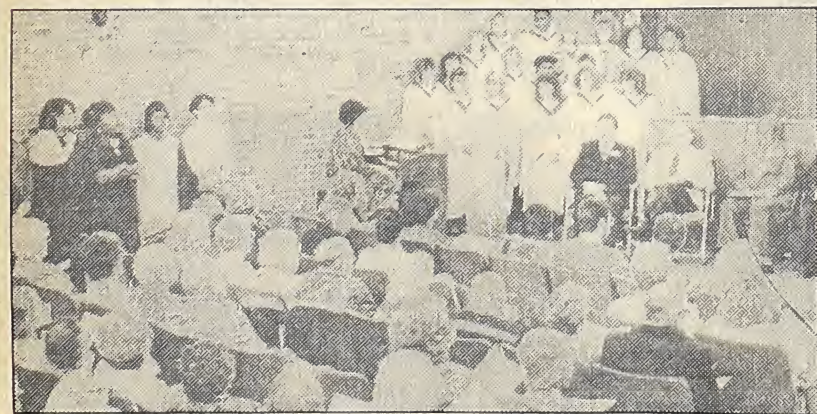

The building was donated by the former owners in 1986 and relocated on the site of a former foundry. The $10,000 cost of relocation was expended through funds acquired from the Community Block Grant program.

"Volunteer efforts as well as private donations of over $23,000 have allowed the project to progress at its current status," said Oakes who added that over 350 volunteer man-hours have contributed to the project.

Oakes stressed that at least 10 surrounding communities with a population of 372,652 are expected to use the facility. "They will be served by the availability of a high-quality, well-designed, accessible cultural/historical resource having regional significance. It should stimulate the local economy and provide additional job opportunities," he said.

"It's just going to be a nice public place to go," said Varner.

The new team

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

Romulus city officials are strongly in favor of the planned construction of a new $340 million Ford stamping plant in the neighboring city of Wayne. But these same officials are whispering "cover-up" as some details of the negotiations for the plant are revealed.

Romulus city officials said they only recently learned that the plant would have a specific and significant impact on their city.

Mayor Beverly McAnally commented, "We were never officially notified by anybody, neither officials from Wayne, Ford Motor Company or the Department of Natural Resources."

A problem surfaced when the 85-acre site selected by Ford in Wayne, directly south of their existing assembly plant on Michigan Avenue, was found by the DNR to contain 45-acres of protected vegetation termed "wetlands."

As a result of the Wetlands Protection Act of 1979, the city of Wayne was forced to submit a mitigation plan to the DNR that would require those 45 acres of wetland to be replaced, preferably nearby and in the same drainage system.

Wayne city officials found what they were looking for in a privately owned, 72-acre vacant parcel at the southeast corner of Van Born and Hannan roads in Romulus.

According to Mayor Pat Norton of Wayne, the option to buy the land is contingent upon results from DNR groundwater tests at the Romulus site to determine the feasibility of maintaining the property as a wetland. If the site cannot meet the specifications, Wayne officials would be forced to find an alternate location to mitigate the situation.

McAnally called a special meeting in Romulus city hall last Wednesday with officials from Wayne County, the city of Wayne, the DNR, the Downriver Community Conference and the Conference of Western Wayne. At that time, McAnally suggested to officials from the city of Wayne that they look elsewhere for a solution to the wetland problem.

"As we embark on ambitious developments in our own community, this situation is very important to me. The impact on Romulus would be dramatic. Only a month ago did I have an informational meeting with Wayne officials.

— Beverly McAnally

And I've had no contact with Ford Motor Company officials," she said.

McAnally is concerned that should the area be declared a wetland, it would be taken off tax rolls. "What about the tax loss, not only that which is existing but what about the future potential of that land? Who will maintain the land? And who will compensate Romulus for the lost revenue?" asked McAnally.

Up until about two years ago the land was farmed, one neighboring farmer in Romulus noted. Currently, the site is zoned residential and generates between $7,000 and $10,000 in annual taxes. John Zech, assistant city manager in Wayne, disputes that figure and said Romulus receives only about $700 in taxes each year.

According to Zech, the completed Ford plant would generate almost $4 million in taxes each year to the city of Wayne after the 15-year abatement. The Wayne property was reverted to the city for back taxes, Zech said. There is a strong possibility, he added, that the planned 600,000-square foot building would be expanded in the future to 1 million.

"We are negotiating with Ford Motor Company and Wayne County to see who will maintain the wetlands. And because the land would be public land, it would be taken off the tax rolls," said Zech.

On Oct. 16, Ford Motor Company received a permit from the DNR to proceed with their project and land on the site was almost immediately cleared. As one resident at the meeting said, "There are no more wetlands on that site in Wayne."

Romulus City Attorney Barry Seifman questioned the legality of artificially creating a wetland. Dennis Hall of the Department of Natural Resources noted that the Romulus site contains only 15 acres of natural wetlands.

"I don't see any consideration for the city's loss. One obvious question, how can one

School bus incident prompts re-evaluation

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

A fourth grade Romulus student faces suspension after "he went berserk and attacked a bus driver," according to school officials.

The incident occurred enroute to a school last Wednesday morning. "A school bus driver pulled over to the shoulder of the road in an effort to control an unruly student. As she walked toward the back of the bus, she came face to face with a hostile fourth grader who pushed her down, scratched her face and grabbed at her private parts," said another bus driver, Krystal Hance.

Romulus school officials confirmed the attack.

The incident, according to one school administrator, "is a rarity."

John Hadyniak, transportation supervisor, noted that in his 20 years experience, most bus incidents are minor. "There is no problem on Romulus school buses. They're just average kids. And when they misbehave, we go through procedures. I've got a good bunch of drivers. In a year, they log over 900,000 miles. Most problems on a school bus occur early in the fall and late in the spring. Kids get excited and restless," he said.

Students who misbehave are supposed to be written up by the bus driver, according to policy set by the Romulus Board of Education. Students are automatically suspended for both fighting and vandalism.

"Bus transportation is a privilege. With almost 5,000 kids riding the bus every day, you're going to have occasional problems. We've got a good policy and the kids on the buses do a pretty good job," said the administrator who requested his name withheld.

Bus drivers, however, are not quite as optimistic. Hance said that although this case is extreme, it is not far from uncommon. She singled out elementary and junior high school age children as becoming increasingly "difficult to control." High school students are not a problem, she said.

"Everyone is upset," said Hance who blames the problem on parents. "Parents think we're exaggerating. In two incidents last year, someone hit one driver on the back of the head with something and another one in the eye. No one school is worse than another," she explained.

In this latest instance, according to Hance, the student was harassing other children. "One student came crying to the driver. She stop-

What is GLAUCOMA?

Glaucoma is an eye disease that is caused by an increased pressure from the clear, transparent liquid, known as "aqueous humor," inside the eye. This liquid builds pressure around the blood vessels inside the eye, which in turn limits the supply of oxygen to the optic nerve. When the supply of oxygen is cut off, the optic nerve dies, causing permanent blindness.

The sad and alarming fact is that glaucoma usually has no symptoms. However, glaucoma is easily and painlessly detected during a periodic eye examination. Through the use of an ophthalmoscope which checks the health of the optic nerve and a tonometer which measures the pressure level, the symptoms of glaucoma can easily be detected.

Glaucoma can affect people of all ages but is most prevalent in those over 45 years old. The flow of liquid described previously can be restricted by blockage, injury, induced by long term steroid use, or acquired as a birth defect because the drainage components were never fully developed.

The treatment of glaucoma starts with the use of eye drops to control the pressure. If eye drops or other medication fails to control the pressure, surgery is usually necessary. The surgery is a safe, simple and painless procedure, performed in the doctor's office. It is with an Argon Laser, which, through the use of a laser beam, opens the blocked passage so that the liquid may flow and decrease the pressure on the blood vessels.

For more information on this and other eye diseases, please contact The Coburn Clinic.

Grant funds health study

By JANICE FRITZ
ANP Staff Writer

A $20,000 grant awarded to Annapolis Hospital and the Wayne-Westland Community Schools from the Michigan Department of Public Health will go toward a year-long study of adolescent health needs in grades 7 to 12.

The study will determine which health services need development or enhancement within the area and will also help identify other methods of health care delivery, which may include a teen care center, school officials said.

Preliminary planning for the study revealed that there is already a need for improved health care services within the community, according to William Sherman, chairman of the Wayne-Westland Teen Health Center Planning Committee.

"Our preliminary research brought to light the increasing incidence of substance abuse, lack of primary health care, increases in child abuse and neglect, teenage pregnancies and teenage suicides," said Sherman.

The committee will conduct a survey with a portion of the grant money, asking questions of parents, students and professional staff members to gather data about which health care needs demand special attention, Sherman said.

Solid waste group nets 3 area officials

Two local officials were re-appointed and another named to the 13-member Wayne County Solid Waste Implementation Committee by County Executive Edward H. McNamara last week.

State Rep. James Kosteva (D-Canton)—a newcomer to the committee—county Commissioner Milton Mack (D-Wayne) and Ulrich Bauser, director of the Central Wayne County Sanitation Authority were appointed to the special group, which will be responsible for the monitoring of residential and commercial waste streams to determine the effects of changing demographics, economics and technology, changes in landfill capacities and incinerators, "including management activities and contracts at these facilities, in addition to site review for any new disposal sites in Wayne County," McNamara said.

The committee will also be charged with the implementation of the Wayne County Solid Waste Management Plan mandated by state law.

"My goal is to ensure that Wayne County is taking a long-term look at waste disposal needs and that is doing what it can to reduce the dependency on landfills," Kosteva said, after the appointment.

THE ROMULUS CHAMBER of Commerce will present an after hours get-together from 5 to 7:30 p.m. Nov. 11, at St. Lawrence Servo, Inc., 12500 Wayne Road. The event is intended to allow local business people an opportunity to meet and discuss their business and learn about others. For information call 941-5710.

A YOUNG INKSTER man was shot and killed on his way to a church choir practice in Detroit last month. Tony Schaffner, 17, was shot Oct. 17 when he walked into the crossfire of angry neighbors, according to family members. Schaffner was the only son and oldest of three children born to Katherine and Joe Schaffner. His parents said their son was a "real friendly kind of kid and a victim of circumstance. "He was in the wrong place at the wrong time," said his mother, a local Barden Cable Company employee. Funeral arrangements were made by Penn Funeral Home in Inkster with burial at Plymouth United Memorial Park. Memorial donations can be made in care of the Schaffner Memorial fund, 43430 N. Service Dr., Belleville, 48111. For information call 699-3500. According to family members, police have a 17-year-old suspect in custody.

THE 22ND ANNUAL Salute to Government Officials is sponsored by the Southern Chamber of Commerce from 5 to 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 10, at the Security Bank and Trust Building, 16333 Trenton Road, Southgate. Tickets are $17 per person. For more information call 284-6000.

A MINI EXPO called "After Business, Ours," will be sponsored from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 19, by the Southern Chamber of Commerce at Ray Hunter's Flowers, 16153 Eureka Road, Southgate. Hors d'oeuvres, refreshments and door prizes will be offered. Each session provides the opportunity to make new contacts and increase the exchange of products and services between local companies. For information call 284-2500.

THE ROMULUS SENIOR Center offers several special services for senior citizens during the winter months. Legal Aid is available quarterly. Homestead Property Tax Credit is available after February. Telecare, a reassuring, friendly call each day is also offered. The Hot Lunch Program still serves hot lunches daily at 11:30 a.m. in the Senior Center, on Bibbins Street at Shook. Meals can be delivered to the homebound. Information about these and other programs is available at 942-6852.

PARENT TEACHER CONFERENCES for elementary school students are scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 17 and Thursday, Nov. 19 at each school. Parents are now being encouraged to sign up for afternoon conferences at their child's school. Report cards will be passed at that time.

THE ROMULUS HISTORICAL Society is searching for old photos of the 1839 District 1 Schoolhouse as well as all class photos from the years 1930 through 1960. These photos or reprints would be added to the permanent museum collection. Pearl Varner, society president, explained that those early photos of the school house have been difficult to find and are important to the authentic restoration of the school building presently in process. Varner especially asked the long-time residents to search their attics and old photo albums for the pictures. For information call 941-0775.

Abracadabra

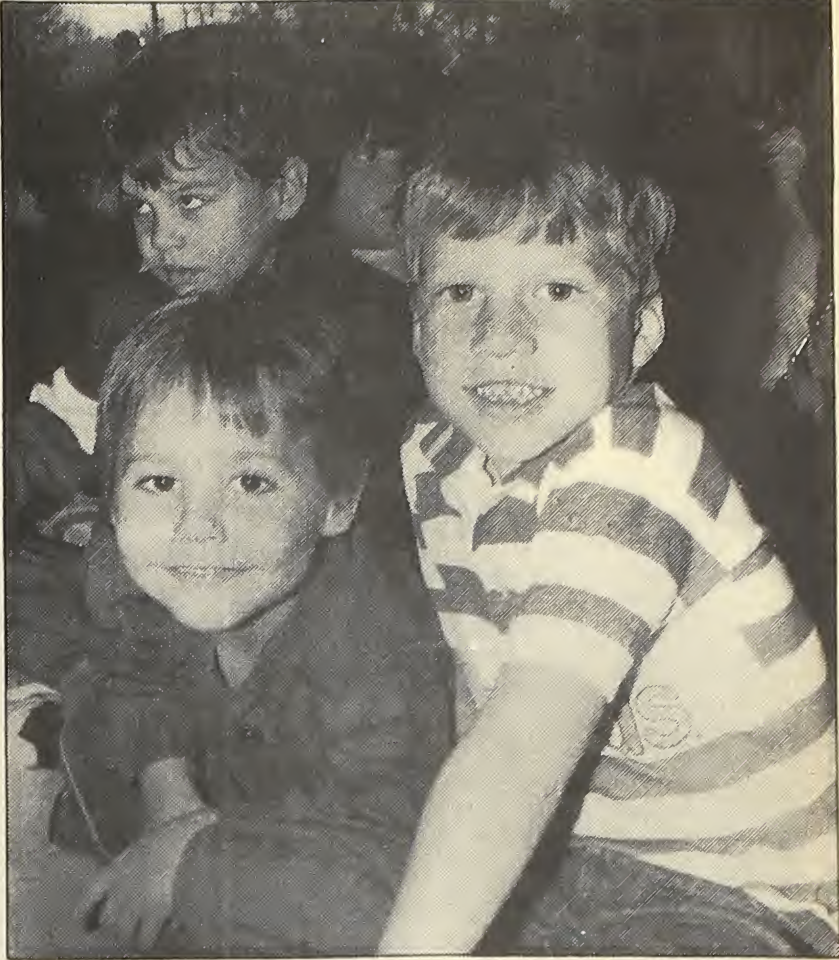

The children at Wick Elementary School in Romulus left their school books behind when they were treated to special performance by a professional magician. They sat spell-bound while watching dove after dove being pulled from every imaginable place, proving once again, the hand is quicker than the eye. The event was part of the Positive Discipline Program, according to Principal Nick Totus. "We're really lucky that this many children were able to attend. But from the expressions on their faces, they look to be the lucky ones," he said.

ped the bus in an effort to control the situation and was attacked by the boy. There's a total lack of discipline out there and parents need to be aware. "Parents need to teach respect and safety to their children. We're losing control and we need their help. When you have 62 children on a bus, and a bus driver is hit with something, it's a very, very dangerous situation," she said. "I would not sound an alarm. We do not have a problem on Romulus School buses. That driver reported to work the next day. She still loves the kids and they still love her," the administrator concluded.

city take from another for the benefit of private industry?" said Seifman. "It could just turn into an odorous swamp. We don't need another nuisance," said McAnally. "Creating wetlands is not like a cookbook. We are still in the mapping stages to determine what communities have wetlands. Only 19 of 83 communities in Michigan have them. We have a five-year program during which we will monitor designated wetlands," said Hall. He said many people like hikers and bird watchers enjoy the natural wetland setting which "enhances surrounding development." Romulus Mayor Pro Tem Mary Ann Banks said she was surprised this area was even designated wetlands. "According to topographic maps, this is some of the highest land in Wayne County. We never guessed it was wetlands," she said. In June, a committee was formed to review the wetland problem across the state. A report completed Oct. 15, calls "for many areas to be addressed including onsite and offsite mitigation." In response to the question of a "cover-up," at the meeting, Zech stated, "We did not have the time. We could not wait. I regret that we may have complicated our relationship." "I'm appalled that our friendly neighbor to the north never notified us about this situation," said Banks. "It looks like your secret snuck out and I'm offended," said councilman William Wadsworth. "I think the city of Romulus has suffered enough," said Councilman Ellis Pennington. "I think this system is flawed," said McAnally. "It's not our purpose to injure the city of Wayne or her development. But it's not our purpose to injure Romulus residents." "If you're surprised in Romulus the way this was handled, you ought to live in Wayne," said an attending Wayne resident. "I think the DNR goofed," said Don Treder, chairman of the Romulus Planning Commission.

Art in the workplace

A traveling show of 12 selected artworks has taken to the road in Romulus where each month an area business will display local student art work. "Art in the Workplace," is sponsored by the Romulus Arts Council. The student art pieces were selected last May at the Michigan Week Festival Student Art Festival. Art will be displayed in the business lobby or cafeteria. Christa Quandt, director of sales for the Romulus Holiday Inn, left, stands with student artist, Shannon Connolly, Romulus High School Senior and John Percy, chairperson of the program. Her watercolor, entitled "The Lounge Area," will be on display for one year in the Holiday Inn lobby. Percy noted, "The theme of the project is to bring community residents closer with their local businesses through the arts." The Romulus Roman will highlight a different business and student artist each month during the upcoming year. ANP photo by Mike Cardew/staff photographer

Hospital sale is still the answer

When deciding whether or not to sell the five hospitals owned by the Peoples Community Hospital Authority, affiliate them with another health care agency or otherwise alter the structure of the local hospital authority, the citizens in the community should cast the final vote.

Last month, the board of directors of the PCHA voted not to sell the hospitals, despite a recommendation in October in a University of Michigan Hospitals report supporting the sale. The board members decided, instead, to become affiliated with another medical center, health care group or teaching institution.

The affiliation – or any change in the structure of the publicly owned and operated hospitals – must first be approved by the state Legislature in the form of an alteration to Public Act 47, which created the PCHA in 1947. PCHA officials are preparing a proposal for state lawmakers and expect to send it to Lansing for approval there within 60 days.

But before the fate of the PCHA is decided, citizens and lawmakers should consider all of the issues at hand.

A huge consideration in any sale of the hospitals or affiliation with another agency will be the fate of about $27 million in a capital improvement fund, a fund each taxpayer in the 24 member communities of the PCHA helped to build.

Residents in PCHA communities are each year levied up to .2 mills in taxes to repay the outstanding bonds which were issued to fund the construction of the five PCHA hospitals. Currently, the fund represents a cash surplus of $27 million. Three years ago, however, the fund equaled $33 million.

If the PCHA becomes a part of another agency – and is no longer an agency totally controlled by the public – will the $27 million contributed by the taxpayers be returned to the taxpayers? Or will those funds be considered a donation or a contribution to the new organization?

We have gone on record supporting the sale of the five PCHA hospitals. We still believe that plan would be the best to promote a more financially stable and secure health care organization for all, while relieving the taxpayers of an unnecessary tax burden.

Such a sale, we feel, should include a refund of all PCHA assets – including the $27 million cash surplus – to the taxpayers in each of the 24 member PCHA communities.

Last week, one member of the PCHA board criticized us as at a local council meeting, saying that newspaper editorials such as this one were the only opposition to a PCHA board-sponsored plan last year that would have allowed the organization to become a private, non-profit organization. Our endorsement of the sale of the five hospitals was also attacked.

In fact, we, as a newspaper, do not stand alone. Officials of several communities – including Huron and Van Buren townships and the cities of Woodhaven, Flat Rock and Melvindale – have taken our side and have gone on record supporting the sale. But, then again, our reasons for taking such a stand were never to see how much support we could gather.

Instead, our reasons for closely watching the changes in the PCHA are quite simple – you the reader, the health care recipient and the taxpayer.

We still feel the sale of the hospitals is the answer. We still feel the current PCHA should be disbanded. And we still feel each taxpayer in the community deserves to be reimbursed the $27 million from the capital improvements account if any change in the PCHA is made.

And for the sake of our readers, we're not backing down . . .

Wetland solution missing

The battle of the North and South is again brewing. Only this time, it's the officials from Wayne and Romulus who will be donning the blue and gray battle uniforms.

Representatives of the two cities have become entangled in a figurative war because of a "wetlands" controversy, a controversy that reinforces the need for prompt state action in revisions to the wetland law.

Wayne city officials earlier this year agreed to purchase a 75-acre parcel of land located in Romulus from a private citizen if the land can be transformed into a "manmade wetland." Wayne officials plan to convert 45 acres of the land into a wetland in order to give the green light to construction of a $340 million Ford Motor Co. stamping plant within the city.

The Romulus land was needed by the city of Wayne because the land located south of the current Ford Motor Wayne Assembly plant – the location of the new stamping plant – has been dubbed a wetland by state Department of Natural Resources officials. Because it is a wetland, no development can be constructed on the site without a waiver from the DNR. Under state law, wetlands are the "untouchable," state-controlled areas which are needed to support aquatic and plant life in Michigan. The lands have become highly controversial because they have been responsible for the nixing of several possible commercial developments for municipalities, including a Ford Motor Co. expansion in Van Buren Township.

In order to obtain the needed waiver, a municipality or business must agree to locate – or create – a wetland equal in size to the displaced land near the original site. Wayne officials chose the 75-acre Romulus parcel, which is located just south of the new stamping plant.

Romulus city officials are opposing the sale of the land by the city of Wayne, since the new Romulus wetland will be taken off of the tax rolls. The land will be taken off the books because the city of Wayne – a non-profit, non-taxable entity – will own it.

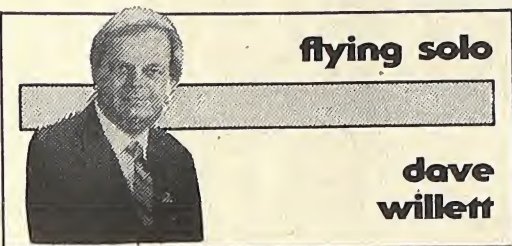

Romulus officials claim the loss in tax revenue from the land will amount to about $7,000 to $10,000 per year. Wayne officials contend the tax revenue loss will be only $700.

Whatever the loss and however bitter the battle between the two cities becomes, the time is now for prompt action by state lawmakers to address the current wetland law. Sources from Lansing have indicated that there are currently between 10 and 15 pieces of legislation before the lawmakers on the issue. A special study committee has also been formed to pinpoint key areas of the wetlands law that need revision.

But time is precious. Each day the political battle on the proposal continues in Lansing, commercial developments are lost, and boundary wars erupt. Each day the issue is debated at the state level, new wetland problems and confusions develop locally.

We again urge the state lawmakers and officials of the DNR to expedite a decision on the wetlands within the state. We need answers, we need clarifications, we need to know how to deal with these wetlands.

Quest of the spirit

dave willett

up a great personal tragedy as a result of his notoriety.

Christa McAuliffe died in a terrifying and horrible accident in her attempt with her crew members to achieve a dream for herself and for so many others for whom she carried a banner.

So again I ask, what is it that causes some to be driven to achieve greatness, at the risk of all they hold dear, and often at the cost of their own life?

The answer, I believe, rests within the realm of the spirit of man. It is beyond tangibles, beyond logic, perhaps beyond any thought of the cost of life on this earth. It is, I believe, a matter of a spiritual quest.

In the world we live in today, we tend to deal with things and matters in a very practical way, or at least we attempt to do so.

We struggle to balance our budget, spend our time and money wisely, care for those who care about us, do our job, take care of our health...and so it goes.

Yet I believe it is only when we rely on the spirit within which speaks to us of a higher calling that true greatness is ever achieved.

Can you imagine how many people must have told Thomas Edison to "give it up" because his inventive experiments would never work? Consider the personal torment experienced by Galileo for having the audacity to suggest that the order in the heavens was not as the church taught. Wonder with me for a moment how many would have died had not Dr. Jonas Salk finished his work on the polio vaccine.

I am often reminded of just how human and vulnerable we all are. We catch colds, lose our temper, quit when we are tired. We get depressed, or at other times are carried away with elation.

Conversely, I believe we have within all of us the same human, if not super human, ability to achieve great things, if we would but listen to the spirit that says, "yes, I can". Unleashed from conscious negativism, it speaks out loud and clear and says "I can succeed. I can complete that which seems impossible. I can do what others say I never will. I can achieve what others say I dare not attempt".

As individuals we must decide whether we are up to the great challenges of life, or whether we will leave greatness to others, or see it left undone.

Today in the world there are hundreds of thousands dying of starvation. Horrible diseases are ravaging the population. Humanity is desperate for more efficient ways of producing food, clothing and shelter for the benefit of mankind.

Will we pursue the goals of the heart, and attempt to do what no other has done before, risking the plunge from the side of the mountain to the valley floor? Each must answer that question for himself.

May each of us, in our own way, be moved to attempt greatness.

See you next week.

Clerk challenges 'distorted facts'

To The Editor:

You have repeatedly distorted and manipulated the facts on the unfair labor charges which were filed against the office of the clerk. (Canton Eagle.)

Repeatedly quotes are provided from Dan Durack, Jim Poole and other board members as well as Elaine Weiss. It is obvious that your intent is to project the issue as it occurred but to intentionally fabricate and confuse the facts.

I will expect to see a team response by those involved in this case in your column shortly. After all, Durack works for the four votes on the board, and so does the attorney.

But at least one thing is clear, Durack has lied to you when he stated that the clerk refused the township attorney, and I have the documentation to prove it.

Not at all. They don't get everything they deserve.

Linda LaVeque

Vietnam veterans didn't. Veterans from other wars did.

Henry Sokolowski

The older ones did. The younger ones don't.

Korean vets finally got recognized, but it took a long time.

I don't think they did at all. Vietnam veterans were made to feel ashamed.

They are still reacting to things that happened 20 years ago. It was a political war.

No!

Video: Evanski hopes to start new trend

By RAY DAY
ANP Managing Editor

The very closest friends of Steve Evanski of Inkster need not wait for a Christmas card this year. They simply will not be receiving one.

However, if those same friends are wise, they will be sure to have a videocassette recorder on hand for the holidays. For it is with such a device that Evanski will be spreading his Christmas cheer.

No, Evanski isn't a contemporary Scrooge. He has no vendetta against Christmas card manufacturers either.

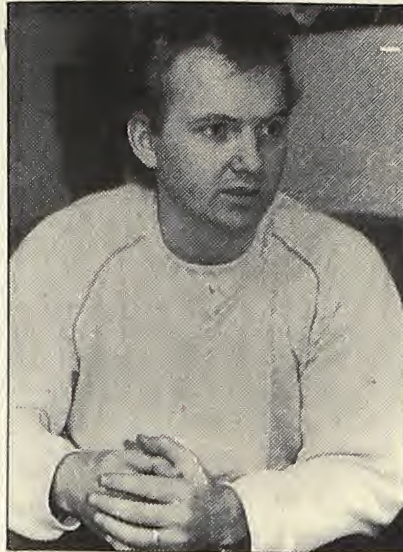

What he is, is an inventor. And a clever businessman, as well.

Evanski, 30—a Belleville native and 1975 graduate of Belleville High School—has created, obtained a trade mark and begun producing in numbers "Timeless Video Greeting Cards." Such a title seems fitting when considering that Evanski's holiday greetings must be updated each year for about seven years and will last—most likely—a lifetime. But the "card" part of the title... it could be misleading.

You see, Timeless Greeting Cards are five-minute, plastic, custom-made videotapes of one or several members of a family. Evanski has constructed a set, invested in thousands of dollars worth of video equipment and enlisted the aid of several family members to help in the taping, copying and packaging of the tapes. Thus, each Christmas since 1985, Evanski and crew could be found manning cameras, positioning children on Santa's lap and shouting "action" in the malls and video stores where he temporarily set up shop.

All of this he does "on the side," in addition to his full-time job as a customer service representative for Drawite.

The concept of a taped video greeting—which initially sells for $19.95 and $5 for each additional copy of the tape—has been marked as a novelty for the more than 300 customers who purchased such a greeting last year, and, according to Evanski, is an idea that will bring him national fame, notoriety and monetary riches.

And while such recognition would, no doubt, be enjoyable—for him, his wife, Mary, and 16-month-old son Andrew—Evanski's motive behind his video greetings are sincere—a sincerity and sense of compassion that shines brightly from his humanistic personality.

ASSOCIATED NEWSPAPERS: How did you get started in the video business?

EVANSKI: It started out as a hobby. I bought a camera and a recorder back in 1980. No sooner that I had it, I was on this committee for the Belleville parade. They wanted to film this parade and asked if I would do it. So I got funding and a few sponsors, and I videotaped it.

From there, I got involved in the public access program (of Omnicom cable, Belleville). I learned about the equipment and how everything runs. Then it turned into a part-time job.

My mainstay is weddings. And still is.

All of that led to forming a company (in 1986 and three video cameras later), Ascot Video Productions, and eventually Timeless Video Greeting Cards.

ANP: You said you now videotape weddings and, of course, have the video greetings cards. What interested you in videotaping so much that you would start a business of it?

EVANSKI: Actually, it was about 10 years ago when I was a senior in high school, the high school had a reel-to-reel video machine. I was introduced to that and really got to like it.

Video is a better way of documenting. It can last forever.

I guess I wanted to find some other way of in the future for (my son's) children to see how he was. I would love to see my grandparents. I think that is actually how it started. We have one picture of my grandfather, two of my grandmother, and we've got them out in the foyer. I would love to know what they sounded like and what they talked about.

I don't want this to become a gimmick where it's a sideshow. It's not at all. This is serious documentation of what is going on in the times.

ANP: What kind of equipment does one need to start a video business?

EVANSKI: I have what is called a mini-cam—which was $8,000—the lenses, full light set, a recorder. Really, I have a mini-studio. When I go to a wedding, I carry about $12,000 worth of equipment.

ANP: What is a "Timeless Video Greeting Card?"

EVANSKI: It is legally the taping of life performances. We have a trademark.

Just the Christmas portion of it is one part of the "Timeless Video Greeting Card." We're trying to get someone to document something on tape—a holiday message, a child interacting with Santa, singing... This is something you would send to your relatives who live far away or use instead of a photograph that would sit on a dusty shelf.

ANP: Where do you see this all going? Where do you want to be in 10 years?

EVANSKI: I see us going nationwide. I'm trying to develop the idea of having a video studio that is similar to a photography studio. I would like to do weddings, video greetings... whatever.

Then, I would like to franchise out. Getting my own studio may take three years before I open it up. I have to overcome a few obstacles.

Someday, I would like to be a household name.

Ten years from now, I would like to be in my own studio or nationwide.

Wounds of war never fade away

By JOAN MARY DYER
Belleville City Editor

Veterans of all wars have experienced readjustment problems when they returned home after the battles ceased, but few have had the attention focused on them that has been given the Vietnam veterans.

Termed "the discarded army," the veterans of the Vietnam War have only recently been recognized and had their special needs been addressed. Only in the past few years have memorials been dedicated to the veterans of Vietnam and tributes been given to their service.

Before the ceasefire in January, 1973, 56,244 men were killed and more than 300,000 wounded. In addition, thousands of other men returned home with "inner wounds" which were not tallied in the statistics. The absence of parades and official welcomes to the returning soldiers added to the soldiers feeling of being "discarded."

Some veterans of previous wars note that their fellow soldiers also "had little choice" in serving and "little training" to prepare themselves for the war. Many of those men also experienced severe adjustment problems when they returned from their tours of duty.

Ben Helmke, director of Tamson Center in Taylor, has noticed a "significant number" of World War II veterans who are seeking counseling to deal with their war experiences.

"These are men who never talked about their horrible experiences before," the mental health agency director said, "but now that there are new attitudes about men expressing their feelings, they are dealing with those experiences."

He said that in most instances the veterans who are seeking counseling have been "triggered" by a current problem - sometimes with a family member - which brought their war experiences back into focus and brought back unresolved issues.

"In addition, 20 years of watching MASH on television has also prompted some feelings from the veterans of the Korean War," Helmke said. "Perhaps, this means it is time for all of us to revisit 'Veterans Land' in the light of new things which have happened and our new attitudes."

Helmke said the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington has produced a "fantastic reaction" and has had a profound effect on those who have visited it. It is, he observed, the first war memorial dedicated to the men who fought in the war. All previous memorials have been dedicated to specific battles or to leaders or those battles. Because of this, Helmke said, the Vietnam Memorial has had a "very personal and very powerful impact on those who have viewed it."

Local veterans remember war

World War II memories boost patriotic spirit

By JANICE FRITZ
ANP Staff Writer

When November 11 rolls around, Chuck Wiswell of Romulus always has mixed emotions. It's sort of a combination of pride - because he is a World War II veteran - and anguish - because he has not forgotten the mental and physical pain that he and thousands of other soldiers had to endure while in combat.

Wiswell, 67, remembers vividly the year that changed his life. It was May 1943, and he had been married to his new bride, Helen, for only three months when he was called to the aid of his country.

When he said goodbye to Helen the day of his departure, little did he know that it would be three years before he would see her again.

And in those three years, Wiswell said he would endure grueling combat, watch countless young men give their lives for their country and wonder each day whether it would be the last.

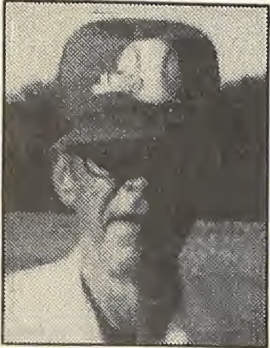

Wiswell was an Army rifleman in the 41st division of the 186th Infantry Division and traveled extensively through Australia and the islands of New Guinea and the Philippines.

When the Allied forces dropped the bomb on Hiroshima in August of 1945, Wiswell had been on land in Mennenau, an island in the Philippines, awaiting the green light from President Truman to invade Japan.

Wiswell and his division moved into Hiroshima about three weeks later. What he saw, he said, in Hiroshima has remained with him ever since.

"There was total devastation in Hiroshima. We saw shadows actually imprinted into the sidewalks from the radiation. People were badly burned and just devastated that their city was wiped out," said Wiswell. "But by then, my fellow soldiers and I were terribly bitter by what we had been seeing for the last three or four years. At that point, it was pretty hard to say that we had sympathy for what had happened. We had tried several times to get the Japanese to surrender, but it just would not work. These people lived and died for the emperor. They really had little or no value for human life. That's where the term 'kamikaze' comes in."

"So we just kept remembering that they did a pretty good job on us at Pearl Harbor," Wiswell

Wiswell said he does not like to talk at great lengths about his experiences in combat from WWII, but he often reminisces about the "good times" he had during those years.

"Oh, there were some nice times back then. I always remember being entertained by Bob Hope and his tour group when we were in Biake Island, (off the New Guinea Coast). It was nice to be able to spend a few hours away from what was really going on in the field," Wiswell recalled.

The end of WWII was met with what Wiswell called "sheer joy."

"Never in my life did I have such a feeling as when I stepped onto American soil again. This was the country that I fought for. This was when I realized the true meaning of patriotism. And it's a shame because I don't think enough people have that feeling for their country anymore."

"What bothers me the most is watching a wonderful country like America being dragged down the drain by some of our leaders," said Wiswell.

"But all in all, this is a great country, and it demands more respect. Even now, when I see them raising the flag, even at a baseball game, I get a chill. Because I know what that flag really stands for."

'I've done my part for this country'

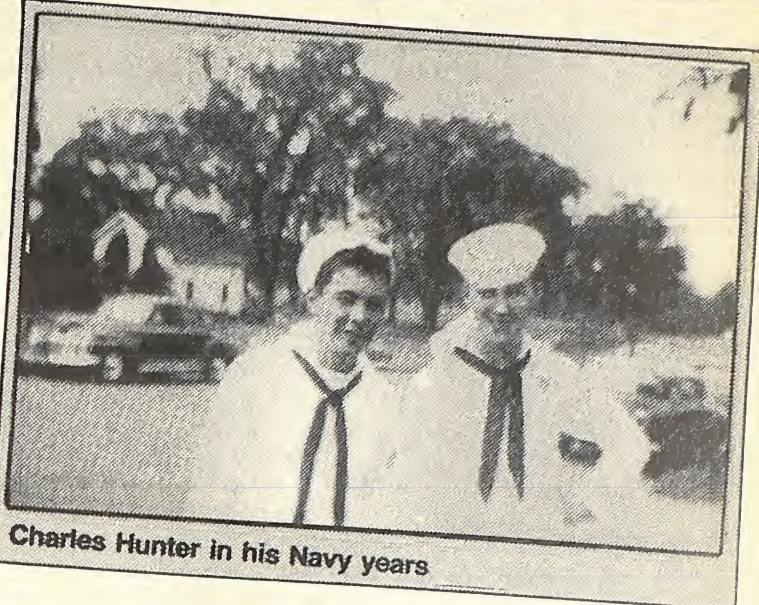

Charlie Hunter of Westland was only 10 years old when World War II ended, but he remembers well the stories his older cousins told him about their combat in the war.

So when the Korean conflict broke out in 1950, Hunter knew he had to do something. After all, wasn't that the thing you were supposed to do for your country?

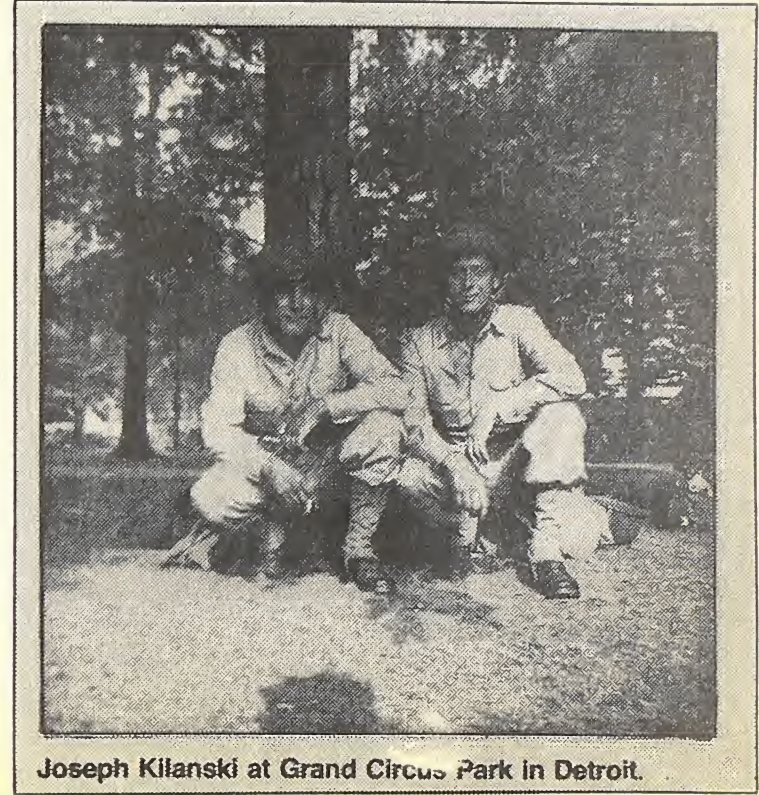

Against the wishes of his mother, Hunter dropped out of his senior year of high school and joined the Navy at age 17.

"I just felt that this was much more important to our country than finishing up the last few months of school. I wanted to be involved in it in some way, any way I could. It was something that most young men my age were feeling in those days. I guess we were the last of the patriots... we remembered the WWII hoopla, and we just had this surge of love and loyalty for our country. I grew up playing Army with my friends, and it was just a natural reaction to want

Together

Veterans' organizations provide common bond in times of crisis

By JANICE FRITZ
ANP Staff Writer

When a war ends, the men lucky enough to have survived the battles of combat are faced with another battle - the battle to pick up the pieces of a life shattered by gunfire and blood.

And despite the efforts of family members who try to make a veteran's life as normal as possible, things are never the way they once were.

In comes the veterans' organizations to help make the adjustment.

Two local veteran organizations typify the more than 10,000 veterans organizations nationwide, which are geared to supporting war veterans.

Bob Hisko is the commander of VFW post 9885, located on Hix Road in Westland.

Hisko said there are 309 VFW members in his post and about 600 others in a sister post within the city.

To be a VFW member, a veteran must meet the criteria of the VFW, including being honorably discharged from a war, have earned a service ribbon and be an American citizen.

Membership in the post offers the veteran a chance to participate in community affairs, blood drives, bingo nights and reduced prices for rental of the VFW hall.

"We see ourselves as something like a union for veterans. We are the support group that vets know they can count on," said Hisko.

"A lot of people hear 'VFW' and automatically think of a lot of old guys, sitting around, getting drunk and telling old war stories. That's not true. Oh, sure, we will refer to that time in our lives from time to time. After all, that's what brought us all together in the first place. And the hall is a social place."

"But we don't live in the past, and, for a lot of people, war stories are just too painful to discuss," Hisko continued.

Hisko added that all vets share something in common...

"The bond that we all have is our service to our country. That's what we all have in common."

But the aid to veterans doesn't stop there.

The Disabled Americans Veterans Chapter 123 has been in existence since 1958, although the location on Ford Road, east of Merriman Road, in Garden City, is only 9 years old.

Jim Cisco, a chapter service officer for the non-profit organization, said he has been with the organization almost since it began and said the DAV services all veterans who have been disabled during wartime service, as well as their families.

"We can help vets obtain financial help from the government, and we can help make sure that widows and children of war vets are taken care of. Most people who need assistance of some kind usually have a tough time finding out where they should go first. It can seem very overwhelming to them. That's where we come in. We can help get forms filed with the government, we can help people to get access to our health and welfare fund. We help the need," Cisco explained.

The 415-member chapter features monthly membership meetings, during which common service problems are discussed, according to Cisco.

And, Cisco said, because the organization is a non-profit one - serving Garden City and the surrounding communities - most of the people who work there give a lot of their time generously, without pay. But, he said, the no-pay part of the job is not a problem.

"Our pay here is the satisfaction that we get from just helping these people. It's the least that we can do for them after they did so much for our country," said Cisco.

JUST MARRIED

Gregor — Beltrame

Barbara J. Gregor of Wayne and Jere A. Beltrame of Marquette were united in marriage Aug. 8 in a double-ring ceremony at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Wayne. The Rev. John O'Callaghan officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gregor of Wayne. She is a 1986 graduate of Northern Michigan University, where she obtained a teaching degree.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Beltrame of Marquette. He served two years in the Army in West Germany and is a 1987 graduate of Northern Michigan University with a degree in criminal justice.

The church was decorated with red and white bouquets of glads and carnations. Music was a clarinet solo provided by Julie Beltrame, sister of the groom. Larry Schou was the organist.

The bridal dress was a white, satasheer fabric gown with a high neckline, lace v-yoke, ruffle peplum with lace trim and a draped, floor-length skirt. A white, floral headpiece accented her floor-length veil, and she carried a bouquet of red and white roses.

Marie Gregor, the sister of the bride, served as the maid of honor, while Sharon Gregor and Debra Gregor, also the bride's sisters, served as bridesmaids.

George Beltrame, the brother of the groom, served as best man, while Steve Beltrame, brother of the groom, and Ken Gregor, brother of the bride, served as ushers.

A reception was staged following the ceremony at the Oddfellow Temple in Wayne. A rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's parents, preceded the wedding day at their home.

to get involved in it now. So off I went," said Hunter.

Hunter, who is the director of the Nankin Transit Authority, said it was a move that he has never regretted.

"I feel that I've done my part for this country and I'll always continue to do what ever I can to serve it. I really don't think that as many people today would be willing to do that. Back when I was enlisted, defectors were just unheard of," continued Hunter.

During the war, Hunter was assigned to ship defense and maintaining the fighter aircrafts and small bombers. While he was never in actual combat, Hunter said he played a major support role during the war and that he wasn't completely out of danger.

"Ships are usually the first thing that are hit and we had to always be on alert. While I didn't actually go out on the line to fight, I always appreciated the fact that there were so many men out there losing their lives during the short time the war had gone on. And there was never any of the bantering between branches of the service. Everyone, no matter which branch they were in, was working toward the same thing...to defend our country," said Hunter.

World War II taught patriotism

By JOAN MARY DYER
Belleville City Editor

On the day that Joseph Kilanski received his induction notice to serve in World War II, similar communications were received by fellow Belleville area residents

Fred Wahrmann, Archibald

Moesser, Albert Martin, Michael Koczon, Marvin Morde, Eugene Pichan, Herman Russell, Harry Neal, Benjamin Robidou and Louis Carl Colver, all of Romulus, received their draft notices at the same time.

"Communications were not always good," Kilanski said, "and, sometimes, the first word you had about being called up for the service was when you read it in the newspaper."

Kilanski, who is currently the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 4434 commander, lost touch with most of the young men who began their tour of duty with him in 1942. Now — some 45 years later — Kilanski was suprised to see Fred Wahrmann as a patient in a hospital he visited recently. Even though the men had lived in neighboring communities, they had not seen each other since the day they were called to the service.

"I ended up at Camp McCoy in Wisconsin," Kilarski said. "For awhile I was stationed at a military prison in the beet fields of Caro (Michigan), and then sent to Fort Sam Houston to medical school."

After his training as a surgical technican, Kilarski served in a field hospital in Okinawa. He recalls thinking, "small world," when a local man, who is now deceased, was brought in to the field hospital for treatment.

Kilanski, 69, who is serving his fourth term as post commander, believes the comradeship of the veterans group is the most important aspect of the organization. The VFW consists of veterans who have shared similar experiences and understand the good and bad times that were part of their tours of duty, he said. In addition, the VFW has many programs geared to helping the veterans with their current needs and problems.

"Now is the time that we really need one another," Kilanski said.

Cooking

By SUE WILLETT
ANP Executive Editor

It took three minor heart attacks to inspire Lee Cox to change her way of cooking — but change she did, and her heart has rewarded her by performing normally ever since.

Cox admits that adhering to the dietary restrictions prescribed by health professionals to reduce cholesterol was a big adjustment, but now that she has been a "healthy cook" for a number of years, she is uncomfortable with her old eating habits. Initially, she used the Pritikin Cookbook, authored by a heart-specialist-turned-nutritionist, to develop a method of eating healthy foods. Her diet includes no fats, salt or egg yolks.

"We stick mainly to fresh vegetables and fruits, lots of fresh vegetables and fruits," Cox explained. "When I was 25, I got sick, and the doctor told me it was downhill from there. I decided I wanted to get wonderful as I got older, so I changed my ways."

Three minor heart attacks before the age of 33 further convinced Cox of the merits of changing her ways.

"We eat chicken, turkey and fish, very rarely any red meat," she explained.

Cox is fortunate in her pursuit of absolutely fresh produce as her parents own a farm, and during the winter months, she concentrates on the fruits and vegetables available at the produce market.

Healthy cooking requires healthy shopping, Cox explained. While the time she spends cooking is much less than many gourmets prescribe, she makes up for it with trips to the grocery store, for only a few items, the produce market for the specialties there, a special fish market and a trip to the meat market for poultry. All this while maintaining her 10-hour-per-day, six-day-a-week schedule at the Pro Shop at the Wayne Community Center.

Cox is cooking for her two offspring, ages 19 and 22, who she said, "Take this for granted. Their friends love it though, we do a lot of stir fry... a lot of stir fry," she emphasized.

Cox denied any similarity to gourmet cooks and explained that everything she does is as simple as possible.

"I believe in eating only good, fresh foods. I'll go wherever I need to for fresh items. The fresher, the better," she said.

Cox is also a disciple of radio personality Dr. Portnor, a holistic healer who dispenses healthy food advice each afternoon on the airwaves. As she is a captive audience at work, Cox explained that she has learned a great deal about healthy eating from the doctor.

Some of her tips include the benefit of garlic to lower cholesterol, the preventive effects of broccoli, cauliflower and brussel sprouts on intestinal cancer and the wonders niacin, found in green vegetables, performs on cholesterol levels.

Along with red meat, sugar and salt, Cox avoids palm oil and cottonseed oil, which she considers a serious danger to health. She cautioned that these ingredients are found in nearly all prepared foods on the grocer's shelf and should really be avoided in favor of fresh foods. As for desserts, Cox makes one treat a week using, of course, fresh fruits and substituting honey for sugar.

Wayne cook watches diet without sacrificing taste

"If I use three pounds of sugar a year, it's rare," she said.

She enjoys one portion of the dessert which is then taken to the office or given away to avoid temptation.

And lest readers think she is a complete paragon of virtue, Cox admits she does submit to one temptation, the fresh bread at Charley's restaurant in Wayne.

"I'm so good, nothing on the potato, nothing on the fish, no dressing on my salad, but what good does it do when you eat a double portion of that wonderful bread?" she confessed with a laugh.

"Most of what I've learned has been through experimenting and trying new things," Cox said.

She presently applies her philosophy of food to a number of Mexican dishes, although she ensures that the ground beef used is lacking in fat content. She uses garlic powder (not salt) and cumin in her cooking.

LIME BREAST OF CHICKEN

2 boneless chicken breasts, skinned and washed and trimmed of Excess fat
Black pepper
Garlic powder
Juice of one fresh lime

1 cup of white wine

Pound the chicken breasts lightly to flatten, and season with the pepper and garlic powder to taste. Add the lime juice to the wine and marinate for at least one hour. This can soak for up to eight hours in the refrigerator, but the tenderizing is complete in 60 minutes or so. Charcoal broil or grill under broiler for 8 minutes on each side.

BEEF SALAD

This is an old family favorite, Cox admitted, and is not only delicious, but attractive because of the rich color.

2 pounds or so fresh beets, boiled, cooled and diced
1 large onion, diced
6 eggs, boiled and diced (no yolks for the health conscious)
Mayonnaise for dressing

Mix the ingredients together and add mayonnaise to taste. Chill at least one hour before serving.

FRIED GREEN TOMATOES

1 large onion, diced
1 green pepper, diced
6 green tomatoes, quartered
1 cup Progresso Bread Crumbs

Saute onion and green pepper until just tender. If not using a wok or a Silverstone pan, add a little Fleishmann's margarine to prevent sticking. When tender, add tomatoes and garlic powder and black pepper to taste. Cook, just until tender and about 10 minutes before serving add Progresso bread crumbs to coat vegetables.

Gold weather is 'cookie time'

It finally happened. Completely unobserved, fall snuck up on me and cold weather is here. Despite the heavenly days that we have been enjoying lately, cold weather is inevitable. The only good thing about this news is that this is also perfect cookie weather. There are those who claim that I will use any excuse in the world to bake cookies (and subsequently devour them) but I just ignore them and continue my adventures in the kitchen.

Generous Goodfellows

Each year, Manufacturers National Bank donates hundreds of dolls made by employees to the Goodfellows Organization which distributes them to needy individuals and disabled children. The dolls are judged and prizes awarded to the best dressed among them. Kitty Given, Ift, Jan Carter and Donna Gray of the Romulus branch at the corner of Goddard and Shook Roads participated. Gray's doll formerly earned first place for workmanship. Given created a doll that earned grand prize in the city-wide competition among the 114 branches and is permanently displayed at Cobo Hall in Detroit.

Come and get it! St. Aloysius breakfast is success

By JANICE FRITZ
ANP Staff Writer

He smiles on the faces of those leaving the St. Aloysius Catholic Church All-You-Can-Eat Pancake Breakfast last Sunday were a sure indication of the success of the endeavor.

The third annual event was sponsored by the St. Aloysius Parents' Club and was initiated and organized by Nancy Farmer of Romulus.

Farmer said she thought the breakfast would be a great way for the St. Aloysius Parents' Club to make some much-needed money.

"I figured that, while people would be here on Sundays, anyway, they would welcome the chance to eat a nice breakfast and get a chance to converse with their friends. And it's all for a good cause," said Farmer.

Proceeds from the breakfast are expected to go toward the purchase of school supplies and to fund extracurricular activities.

Farmer said the King Pancake Company was hired in to flip the hotcakes while the St. Al Dads were put to work as the sausage cooks.

Farmer said the breakfasts are expected to continue being staged in the fall, since she said it is easier for people to eat more when it's cooler outdoors.

Angels are a part of everyday life

Do you believe in angels? I do. Have you ever been led by an angel? I have.

One night after visiting in a hospital for several hours, I left to discover a heavy snowfall. I asked the Lord which route to travel home. At that time a little yellow car appeared in front of me. Its tail lights were shining brightly, and since there were no visible car tracks on the road, I just followed that car. It proceeded steadily at 30 mph without changing lanes and led me from one highway to another for 25 miles—right to my house. I knew for a fact that the Lord had sent an "angel" out before me to keep me in the way and to bring me into the place..." (Ex. 20:23)

Throughout the Bible, we read about ministering angels who lead, guide, protect and strengthen God's people.

"For He shall give His angels charge over thee to keep thee in all thy ways." Ps. 91:11

"But...the angels...are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" Heb. 1:13-14

Jesus said, "I am the Way..."

God said that the angel will keep us on the way and bring us into a place—a place that He has prepared, a place of victory, a place of restoration, a secret place of the Most High—under the shelter of the Almighty (Ps. 91:1).

"Beware of him and obey his voice... for my Angel shall go before thee..." Ex. 23:21

The Lord commands us to pay close attention to his angel

from the pulpit

and do what he tells us.

The Apostle Peter also had experiences with angels. One specific account in Acts 12 tells how the angel of the Lord led him. He had been apprehended and put in jail with 16 soldiers placed around him to keep him from escaping. In addition, he was bound with chains, and there were other guards placed at the doors. Obviously, his enemies wanted to be sure that he could not escape.

I wonder how often the Lord has sent angels to lead you out of bondage and you didn't recognize them. You just thought they were a yellow car, a unique circumstance, another person. But now you are free. You know where you are. Jesus said, "Blessed are you who believe and have not seen." The angels are ministering spirits sent forth to minister to you as an heir of salvation.

You are not fighting a battle singlehanded. There is a host of angels encamped around about those who love the Lord. Prepare for an angel of the Lord to lead you, to protect you on the way, and to bring you to a place of victory!

Yvonne Karl writes a newsletter, "The Olive Branch," for the New Life Community Church of Westland.

Coach

"This team is a pleasant surprise," Yauck says. "They matured quickly, and came a long way in a short time."

A Saginaw native, Yauck played collegiate football for Iowa and was an all-Big 10 Conference selection in his senior year. Along with "being a surprise", the 1987 Robichaud team also shattered a slew of records. The 274 points the Bulldogs scored (their opponents got 79) eclipsed the old mark and Wheatley's 96 points are also the most scored by an individual.

And what about the future, coach? "It's obvious we are going to have a team with a lot of experience next year," Yauck says. "And our players realize that they are going to be one of the teams to beat."

All-Area

CHILDERS, picked all-SAC, is at the other guard slot. An excellent blocker, Childers provided the doorway for running back Terrell to slip through for yardage. "Any time Lorenzo had any big runs, we ran him behind Darnell," Glaze pointed out. At 6-1, 253-pounds, the colleges obviously won't over look this fine prospect. "Several (colleges) would like to get his signature on a letter of intent," added the Viking coach.

WOOD, a senior center, anchors the offensive line. He's 5-7, 170 and is proficient on 90 percent of his assignments. Also named to the SAC first string, Wood did a superb job blocking the opposition's middle (nose) guard. "Although Ken isn't big, he has the weight to move people around. He's a real competitor," Yauck added.

Twelve players, who were "hit men" and "have acquired an uncanny ability for lateral pursuit", were picked for the 1987 Associated Newspapers' All-Area defensive team.

The lineup includes: Defensive line - Lennell Brooks (Robichaud), Jeff Sykes (Belleville), Tony Greca (Romulus), Tony Dawson (Belleville) and Roderick James (Robichaud); Linebackers - Len Ziegler (New Boston Huron), Warner Smith (Robichaud), Rick Champagne (Romulus), and Gary Johnson (Robichaud); Halfbacks - Jon Tackett (New Boston Huron), Dubon Bellinger (Belleville), and Carl Brown (Robichaud).

BROOKS, a 5-7, 160-pound junior, brings to All-Area two years of varsity experience and speed to track down the ball with "reckless abandonment," according to Yauck. During the Highland Park game, Len snatched a midair fumble and rode it back for a 42-yard touchdown. And, in the Inkster game, he scooped up an errant ball and raced 23 yards for a TD. He loves sacking the quarterback - something he did eight times this season. He also received credit for 42 solos and 27 assists and, remember dear reader, he will be back next year.

SYKES, a two-year starter, reads plays well. Like a mind-reader, Jeff has conditioned himself to see the play, strike quickly and efficiently. Here's what McCarney has to say: "When we review the game films, one fact stands out about Sykes - he is always where he has to be." A two-way starter, Sykes was also one of the Tiger team leaders. Although he has had college offers, he has not made any commitments.

GRECA, a 6-3, 180-pound senior, also is a two-year starter for the Eagles of Romulus. Tulane University has taken a good look at this fine defensive tackle and is very much interested in his ability. "Tony has the tools to play just about any position," said Glover. "He's a tough competitor and will make an excellent college player."

DAWSON, who suffered a dislocated elbow, refused to allow the injury to stop him. His determination and dedication lifted the Tigers and made them competitive in almost every game he played this year. "He has a lot of speed and used it in lateral pursuit to get to the ball. Refusing to let an injury keep him out of competition tells you a lot about the character of this young man," said coach McCarney.

ZIEGLER, a versatile athlete who can play just about any position on the field, doubled as the Chiefs' fullback when he wasn't cutting down ballcarriers on defense. At 5-10, 175 pounds, he is also an excellent college prospect. Huron's defense was as good as any in the conference and Ziegler was one of the reasons why. "He's an excellent football player and very coachable," says Labeau. "Our problem isn't quality, we didn't have quantity, and that took its toll."

SMITH, a star on the gridiron

as well as in the classroom, the 6-1, 230-pound senior is rated an excellent college prospect. A two-way starter and one of the team's leaders, Warner earned all-conference recognition in the Suburban Athletic Conference. "He's a good trapping guard," Yauck stressed. "He's one player we will truly miss next year."

CHAMPAGNE, averaging eight solo tackles per game, played in the final three games with a broken hand. Knowledgeable and intelligent, Champagne is also one of the few players that Coach Glover turns to for opinions. "Rick has that certain chemistry a linebacker needs - he seems to know just what the opposition is thinking. He is one of the few I would trust with an opinion." Though 165 pounds, Champagne plays as if he is 230.

JOHNSON, at 5-7, 165-pounds, belies the role he plays for the Bulldogs. He is their "hit man". And he does it with a smile. "Probably the most versatile player on this team," said Yauck. "he loves to hit people. And he's one tough kid."

TACKETT, a senior who has made his appearance on these pages as a member of the All-Area Track Team, is the type of player that every coach wants on his team. "He's Mr. Consistency," says Labeau. "the kind of player who gives you more than 100 percent every game."

BELLINGER, at 155 pounds, could easily be overlooked. But he makes his presence known every time he hits the gridiron. In fact, those who come in contact with him on the field don't easily forget. "It was a key situation," related McCarney, "and Southgate was driving. On this one play, Dubon appeared to come out of nowhere and hit the quarterback so hard that he knocked him out. He really can hit." Wolverine 'A' Conference coaches also were impressed. They unanimously selected the Belleville senior for the all-conference team.

BROWN, a starter as a freshman, wore two helmets. He was a standout as a full back and, on defense, switched to the secondary where he shot down enemy aerials and cut down any ballcarrier who dared to venture into his territory. "He is the best open field tackler on this team," Yauck said. "He loves to make contact."

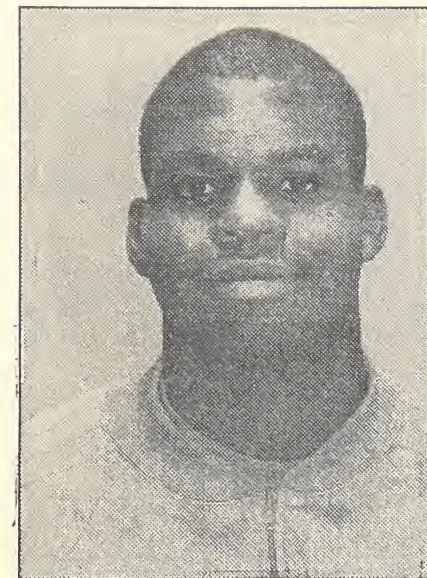

As a fullback, Brown had 91 opportunities, piled up 632 yards rushing for a respectable 6.9 yards per try and also scored nine touchdowns. He accounted for five two-point conversions.

JAMES, a sturdy 6-3 and 210-pound, can be awesome at times. The rugged junior can play just about any position on the defensive line and the opposition always looked the other way in hopes of gaining yardage. They avoided the spot where James has dug in.

"He has the physical attributes of a college player right now," notes Yauck. "A year from now he will be one of the premier players in the state."

Free vision tests offered for seniors

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

Like apprehensive teenagers who dread their first driving test, many people over the age of 55 wonder if their next license renewal could be their last. A Safe Driver Program was established by ophthalmologist, Dr. Lawrence Castleman, of Castleman Eye Clinic in Southfield for drivers over the age of 55. The special program was designed, according to Registered Nurse and Program Coordinator Sally Barnes, to alleviate anxiety among seniors who will take their driving test.

"We don't want you to be surprised that you can't pass your drivers' license test because you couldn't see the eye chart clearly," said Barnes.

The clinic invites all persons over the age of 55, and within three months of renewing their driver's license, to make an appointment for a free glaucoma check and vision test. This checkup doesn't substitute for a complete eye health examination, "but it will give the assurance needed to pass a drivers' test," Barnes said.

Barnes noted there are 34 million drivers over the age of 55 in the United States. "A study by the National Safety Council said older drivers are more accident prone than younger drivers for the number miles driven," she said.

The program begins this week with an advertising blitz in local newspapers and the placement of posters in local businesses.

"Our eyes provide us with 90 percent of the information we need to drive an automobile safely. Yet, it gets more difficult to see the road as we get older. Common eye problems of cataracts, glaucoma or retinal disease can keep you from driving at night, or keep you from passing your drivers' license renewal test," Barnes explained.

Castleman's Eye Clinic opened 15 years ago in the dow-river area and has been at it's present location for eight years.

"Many eye problems are more prevalent among seniors. Some problems prevent them from driving at night. Older people will often attempt to memorize the eye chart so they can take the driving test and pass it. Many seniors are on a budget and simply can't afford an eye test," Barnes said.

"I love seniors. I cater to them. They're so afraid of losing their eyesight. We like to cater to them," she added. For information about the program, call 283-0500.

Cannon, Grimes join Associated Newspapers

Two new staff members have been named to key posts at the Associated Newspapers, company President and Publisher David J. Willett announced this week.

Patrick T. Cannon was named the retail advertising manager of the six weekly publications. In his new position, Cannon will oversee the advertising content of the papers and will direct the ANP staff of advertising representatives.

A Westland resident, Cannon, 32, has eight years of sales experience with various corporations, including a recent stint with the Savin Corp. He is married, has two children and is a graduate of Madonna College and Livonia Bentley High School.

He holds a bachelor of science degree in business administration. He also served in the Air Force for 12 years.

Enthusiastic about his appointment, Cannon said he has set many goals for himself and the company.

"My goals are to increase the quality of advertising and to bring back to the community what they invest in the paper," Cannon said. "As a community newspaper, our paper is essential because it gives people a means of staying in touch with their community."

Publisher Willett, also enthusiastic about Cannon's appointment, said he has great expectations from the new sales manager.

"I have every confidence that Pat Cannon brings to Associated Newspapers the sales leadership and skill to help provide each of our advertisers with the very best means of communicating with our readers," Willett said. "It is no secret that Associated Newspapers publishes the best editorial product in the state. But our readers also want the advertising message local merchants have to offer."

Also joining the Associated staff last week was Ann Grimes. Grimes was named the staff photographer for the six publications.

A Garden City resident, Grimes has five years experience in newspaper photography. She formerly served as a photographer for the Michigan State University Instructional Media Center and was the photo editor of the Hillsdale Daily News.

She holds a master of agriculture in horticulture degree from Texas A&M University, a bachelor of science degree in biology from Southern Methodist University and has attended both Michigan State University and Lansing Community College for classes in journalism and photography.

In her new position, Grimes will oversee the photographic department of the company.

Moving to the area from Lansing to accept the new position, Grimes said she is looking forward to making western Wayne County her new home.

"My goals here are to do a good job, do my job to help improve the overall appearance of the newspaper and to become a productive part of this community," Grimes said.

"One of the most important

Patrick Cannon

and significant elements of any newspaper is obviously the photography exhibited on its pages," Willett added. "In Ann Grimes, we have found a level of professional skill and dedication our readers expect from us."

The Associated Newspapers is a group of six, award-winning, weekly newspapers, publishing The Wayne Eagle, The Westland Eagle, The Canton Eagle, The Inkster Ledger-Star, The Belleville Enterprise and The Romulus Roman.

Dancers: Polish pride evident in their steps

By JOAN MARY DYER
Belleville City Editor

Krystina Rebuc of Canton is only 6, but already she is a three-year veteran in an ethnic dance troupe and so enthusiastic about her dancing that "she once slept with a trophy" she received at a polka festival. Her enthusiasm is not unusual, according to Joanne Ygeal, founder and director of the 105-member Polish Centennial Dancers of Plymouth. In fact, Ygeal said, the dance group — and their families — are all very enthusiastic about the dance troupe.

Youngsters from several western Wayne County communities, including Canton Township, Westland and Wayne, are numbered among the dancers who participate in the festivals, parades and community events.

The dance group is a "family affair" with mothers sewing and embroidering costumes. Moms, dads and other family members assist in the preparations for the parades and festivals and coordinate transportation to the events which are staged as far north as the Houghton Lake Polka Festival and as far south as Cedar Point, Ohio. Last year their "dream trip" to the Rzeszow Dance Festival in Poland was cancelled due to the nuclear accident at Chernobyl.

The group earned the top award in the Plymouth Fourth of July parade and were awarded two second-place ribbons in the Sumpter Country Fest Parade.

Ygeal formed the dance group in 1980 when she responded to numerous requests for a local ethnic dance group. Prior to that time she brought her four children to dance classes in Dearborn Heights, she said. The group, sponsored by the Polish National Alliance, is open to youngsters from pre-school to high school and college students — and not restricted to those of Polish descent. Ygeal said, the majority of the dancers are of Polish or Slovak descent, while others are of German heritage.

The director said the main qualification to join the group is "a desire to dance." Prospective students need not have any prior training or lessons, she said.

"Dancers begin their weekly lessons with ballet exercises and then practice the polka and other folk dances," Ygeal said. "The students also learn about their heritage, customs and culture."

At the end of every class, Ygeal puts the youngsters through some "novelty" dances. The younger ones may do a Smurf routine or a Mary Poppins number, for example.

"It's like taking piano lessons and only being able to play Bach and Beethoven and not being able to play anything that your friends know," she said. "If the youngsters only learn ethnic dances, then when their friends ask them about their dancing, they wouldn't have anything to show them. By adding some novelty numbers, the dancers can bring some of their lessons into their own activities. We want them to be well-rounded."

Some of the dancers also take other dance lessons, Ygeal said, but for many the PNAC group is the only place where they study dancing.

Openings in the dance group are still available this season. Interested individuals may call Ygeal at 464-1263 or Auden Wojtowicz at 427-2885 for information on the group.

Scorpio: Struggles will be ending

ARIES (March 21 - April 20) — Finishing up is now complete. Don't project your anger onto a partner. You may find power struggles you can win, but you may also find you've lost in the long run. Others may resent a show of force and pull their support away. (People who are that strong don't need support!) Ask advice from experts this month on the issue of the conflict, especially shared money, property or control.

You could be starting with all new rules. An opportunity of a lifetime could come around the new moon on the 21st, especially in career areas. Don't fear what appears to be crisis. It is really a healing event, Aries!

TAURUS (April 21 - May 20) — You'd better be in charge of your relationships right now, or you'll resent any form of control your partners may have. Watch "words at work, too, or you could get hoof-in-mouth" disease if you aren't careful. Burning bridges behind you could be a real sad sight, so try to avoid any permanent breaks. Leavings should be done on a good, loving note. (But they should still be done!) Relationships will have a new, better perspective by the new moon on the 21st.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 21) — Whatever your deepest fear is right now, it controls you and gives others a handle by which they can steer you. If your security is based on a person, a job or a situation, you're in big trouble. The only real security is inside you. It is your talents, your ability to motivate yourself and desire to do that. Face the dragon and make a pet out of it to get control back over your life.

If changing your work helps in some way, do it! You can lose more than you would by staying the way you are. Your health needs peace.

CANCER (June 22 - July 22) — End those second-best (or worse) connections with people who have a negative effect on you. If you have any need for secrets, you're not getting your act together at all. Integrity is what your happiness and prosperity depends on, and if you have reason to hide facts, activities or people in your life, you're repeating the past. And this time the consequences intensify.

A new, fresh start with a clean priority list can heal your heart, your wallet and your quality relationships. If you are moving, make it a progress move, not an avoidance move.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 23) — Power struggles get downright ridiculous if you play them with others. No matter who starts it, it can't be done by only one person. If you don't play, no struggle results. Let them win, and you'll find it is much better this way, even if you can't see how at the time. The one with the power, sins and pride can be your downfall. The real sinner is the one who doesn't need to impress others with his power. This is applied to personal or professional areas (or both!)

VIRGO (Aug. 24 - Sept. 22) — "Never discuss religion or politics" is what we always heard from the wise ones. This month, it is so true! Don't expect to change anyone's mind or persuade him. And avoid those who want to change your way of thinking because you're just as stubborn. You could open new communications with those close to you by more listening. (Remember you don't have to agree to hear them out!)

You could be like a drunken sailor with your money and plastic, so really be careful. If you can live without it, you probably should until after the New Year. A very important person could enter your life now!

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22) — Playing catch-up with finances is a lot of work, but work hard, and you'll do it quite well if you're willing to work extra hard and practice lots of self-discipline. It gives you power over your life again; and confidence sky-rockets! In love, you've got more offers and attention, then ever before. Don't settle for those who want to choose you.

You pick the one you're most comfortable with and who wants you too. If there is resistance, release that person so you can grow. They'll only hold you down in the long run.

SCORPIO (October 23 - November 22) — You're through struggling and playing the game. You're making decisions and getting on with it, and there's no more discussions about it. You're starting fresh, and you are not going to look back. If others catch up later, fine, (if there's still a place for them).

If others aren't comfortable with those you surround yourself with, they will have to leave because they don't want that energy around them. Money areas need some work. Some distractions may have caused neglect, but now you can kick it into gear and repair it. You are no one's victim!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 - Dec. 21) — If you're really sick of being sick of it, then do something. You're the only person you can control your life. If others around you aren't supportive, you are not in your proper place. You're finally starting to realize how much potential you may have wasted and can kick into gear now.

But potential isn't worth anything — unless it is used! With every benefit comes more responsibility. You'll be avoiding the very benefits you have been asking for. It is the cost, and it is worth it all!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 20) — End any superficial connections that may be distractions or minor amusements. There is quality in your life, and you could lose it if you don't get those priorities straight. And, yes, you do have to choose. Quality won't be compromised in that way.

A whole new group of friends can come into your life, and this can fill a big void and solve another problem, too. Go upward, whatever you do. Let the "Peruvian Slime Devils" save themselves. You can be a better savior with those who want to be saved from themselves.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19) — Issues dealing with home, family and security are finalizing. You are taking charge of your life and risking your future on you and your abilities. You're doing the right thing as long as you are willing to avoid the old "I'm the 'good' one and they are the 'bad' one" routine.

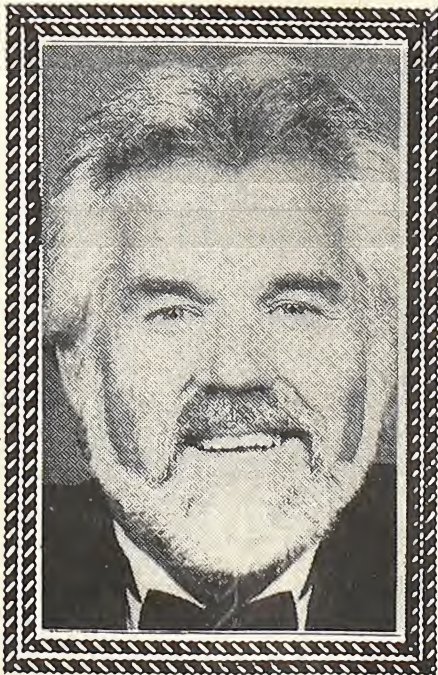

There is no right or wrong here, only outgrowing each other and going in new directions. This may be personal or out in the world. But it all affects security in a way that empowers you over your own life. Sure it's hard, but it's well worth it. Remember, no one is wrong here.

PISCES (Feb. 20 - March 20) — There are major differences in your belief system with someone close to you. You'll have to lay down some ground rules and avoid those subjects or conflicts which are going to intensify. Can't you simply agree to disagree? It is the only thing that will work.

Then let it go. Think about furthering your skills or education because opportunity can provide that if you want it. Travel can bring some wonderful benefits if you go. Break some of those self-imposed prison bars, ("I never . . .", "I hate to . . .") and be more adventurous. You are restricting your growth a lot!
